GOOD WORK

Do me Daily in Norway. Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Norway still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

O. car I. Pitts, Cottage street, Norway, Me., says: "Several years ago I began to suffer from an acute attack of kidney trouble. I had caught a severe cold which settled on my kidneys and brought on terrible pains in the small of my back. There seemed to be a congestion of my kidneys and it was only with great difficulty that I was able to pass the secretions. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and decided to try them. I procured a box from Stone's Drug Store. They helped me from the first and after taking the contents of a few boxes, I was cured. I have not had any trouble from my kidneys since. I am glad to give Doan's Kidney Pills my highest endorsement."

My Old New England Hills.

As I watch the golden sunset slowly sinking in the west. When the twilight day is ended and the birds have gone to rest. Once again my thoughts go roaming to the woodland hills, where I used to roam. And I seem to hear an echo from my old New England hills.

Western breezes sweep my forehead, western breezes fan my hair. But with all these soft caresses, cannot draw me back to those old hills. And as I close my eyelids, this fair vision comes to me; can see as in my childhood, the dear old elm tree; And as children as we played in the cool and restful shade. By its green branches made. And the wild birds in the branches sang their songs so loud and shrill. That the notes seemed to echo, through the old New England hills.

Once again from the pasture, Where the fragrant breezes blow, I saw the first blue violet peeping from the water lily. And I linger by the brookside to where the robins sing. Oh! This place on earth is brighter than New England in the spring.

As I grew up like a wild flower in the tall New England grass. Not to be cut down and withered, but keep struggling to the last; But I must have my purpose; let our restless hearts be still. As we hear the echo from my old New England hills.

In my dreams I hear the ripple of the pond close to the mill. And my dear old mother waiting for her wanderer still; But from some sunny day and will watch the sunshine play, And hear the birds sing again, among the old New England hills.

The Hills of Maine. O hills of Maine, fair hills of Maine, Thy tumbling waters raise the strain And with their silver tones prolong the haunting echoes of my song. O hills of Maine, cool hills of Maine, O'er the fertile valley plain Thy lofty crests with evergreen pine invite the weary to recline. O hills of Maine, dear hills of Maine, When shall I tread thy paths again? Once more a child with streaming locks To frolic o'er thy jagged rocks. And from a gray old tree the gleam Of many an azure lake and stream Lying below me at the base Of some high precipitous face, Or shining brightly from afar Like a fallen silver star!

O hills of Maine, now I am old, The memory of thy beauty thrills My soul, and bears me backward o'er the sea To the land of my nativity. To the land where snowy mountains rise In sunlit splendor to the skies. And wet winds sweep the shore With a deep and thunderous roar. The land where toil and honesty And welcome as warm as the summer sun Where'er the stranger's path may run. The land where the farmer sows his seed To meet the need of winter's need. And stores the grain in the golden fall When autumn days bring joy to all With an equality And did he play merrily.

O hills of Maine, can I forget Thy language, those happy days Of by-gone days, those happy days Of summer light and sunset haze. When dreams of the future and the past Of the clouds the caravan, Tossing his straw hat toward the trees, Listening to the mountain's low moan, Or laughing with the merry brook That showed him many a mossy nook Where violets rose in sunny bloom Half hidden in a pleasant gloom, Or where the hermit wore his nest Of scented grasses neatly pressed. O hills of Maine, fair hills of Maine, Thy tumbling waters raise the strain And with their silver tones prolong The haunting echoes of my song.

Marriage Proposals. Here is a collection of marriage proposals typical of different nationalities. A Russian—"My dear, my little dove, soul of my soul, I love you with my whole heart, with my whole being. I love you madly. I will love you unto death, and should troubles befall us, my love will conquer everything. Be mine, Oh Natasha!"

A Frenchman—"You are divine, ideal. Today I will press my suit before your parents, and my fairy, you will become my wife."

An Englishman—"I am about to start on a long voyage and I shall be lonely. I wonder if you would care to marry me and let us make this journey together?"

A German—"Fraulein, you are a noble woman. You have read and understood my book. I cannot tell you how much I admire and esteem you. May I dare to offer you my hand?"

An Italian—"Clara, mira, you are fairer than the blushing dawn. Your voice is more melodious than the soft wind. Oh, let me kiss those dark locks of yours and let those heavenly eyes not spurn me, for otherwise I must die. Live with me, you I can not."

A Montenegrin—"You are a handsome and a good girl. If you will marry me I will out off two Turks' heads and lay them at your feet."

What is that of the United States?

A BUGLAR'S AWFUL DEED may not paralyze a home so completely as a mother's long illness. But Dr. King's New Life Pills are a splendid remedy for women. "They gave me wonderful benefit in constipation and female trouble," wrote Mrs. M. C. Dunlap, of Leadville, Tenn. If ailing, try them. 25c at The Noyes Drug Store. 18-21

Our Feathered Friends.

The Bluebird's Color. The friendship between the robin and the bluebird is accounted for in a legend. When the robin, filled with pity for the suffering bluebird, bore him drops of water as he hung upon the cross, a little brown bird thought:

"Oh, I too love Him! Why can I not do something to ease His pain?" So she made a cup out of a leaf, and, filling it with water, met the robin and gave it to him. He would not have to fly so far as he returned for more of the cooling liquid. And when at last he came with the news that his Lord was dead she bathed his bleeding breast that was wounded by cruel thorns.

Then the master of the birds said to the little brown bird:—"Because you loved the Lord and would have helped Him you shall henceforth wear a coat the color of the one His mother wears."

"And that is why this little brown bird has ever since been a little blue bird and is never far away from the robin when he comes in the spring. This will be something to think of when a bit of blue flies between you and the sun and you know Our Lady's bird has come."

The Gnatcatcher's Nest. Of course we can all understand that the little gnatcatcher likes a warm snug nest, but why she should build it so very deep and narrow is a riddle and she will not tell us the answer. It must be very uncomfortable for her to sit there day after day with her tail cocked up high on one side and her sharp little bill just sticking out above the other edge. She seems to like it though, and when you go to look at her she is so well satisfied with the situation that if you want to see her pretty speckled eggs you will probably have to pull that long tail gently unless you have shaken the tree very unnecessarily hard in climbing it. This nest was about forty feet up in a big oak tree which the very highest winds could not rick to any extent, so the deep cup shape of her little dwelling was not for fear of the eggs being shaken out.

Now this particular nest I found when it was just begun. The birds didn't mind me a bit but came right up with their mouths full of building stuff and actually sang with their mouths full—a feat which did not seem possible. Of course I thought I was a recognized acquaintance and when I pulled Mrs. Gnatcatcher's long tail just to hint that I would like to take a peep at her house treasures she got real rowdy. If she had been big enough I would have been well thrashed, so I cut my visit very short.

The Surgeon Bird. Two birds were building a nest under a study window. A gentleman sat in that study every day. He watched the birds. They were building the nest of clay. They brought round bits of wet clay in their bills. They stuck these bits upon the wall.

After they had worked busily for a while, would perch on a tree nearby. They would sit and look at the nest. Some times they would fly down and tear away all that they had built. Sometimes, a part of the nest would fall down. Then the birds would sit and think how to build it better.

But Mrs. Bird was a brave little body. She wished to keep on with her work. She did keep on until she was faint and sick, and could not fly up from the ground. Then she lay down. She closed her eyes. She looked very sick.

The other bird looked at her anxiously. Then he turned around and gave three loud, strange cries. Soon, several birds came flying about to see what was the matter.

A little surgeon bird came with them. He looked liked the others, but he soon showed that he was a surgeon. He brought a bit of wet clay in his bill. He ground it fine with his own little beak. Then he spread it on the bird's sore, stiff foot, just as a surgeon spreads a plaster. Next, he took in his bill a long green cornstalk which lay near. He flew up on a tin water-pipe under the window. One end of the cornstalk was near the lame bird. She understood what to do. She took hold of it with bill, and helped herself up on the water-pipe, too. Then the surgeon bird helped her into the half built nest.

Poor Mrs. Bird! It was very hard to be sick, and to move into a half built house.

What do you suppose the little surgeon did next? He went to work and helped Mr. Bird finish the nest, then he flew off home.

Could the gentleman in the study have been kinder or wiser than that little bird?

The First Feeding of Chicks.

When a chick is first hatched it is about as soft and mushy as a piece of animal life as can be imagined. Its bones and flesh are merely a bag to hold the yolk of the egg from which it came. This yolk is inclosed whole in the chick's interior and furnishes the necessary food for the first few days. It doesn't need any other food, indeed other food is likely to do it harm. And until this yolk has been entirely dissolved and assimilated
by the chick's system, it is better that it have nothing to eat.

These few days when the yolk is being digested should be a time of preparation for the time when the chicks will need other food. For this purpose there is one thing absolutely essential and that is sand. But not a newly hatched chick can get the sand and before it can run it will be found picking at the coarse grains of sand and small pebbles. This is not due to hunger, for it is not hungry; but it is its instinct to prepare its grinding apparatus and get it in working order.

Some breeders prefer keeping all water away from all newly hatched chicks, believing it produces bowel derangement; but this is very doubtful.
Many breeders allow the chicks water from the start, putting it before them
along with sand and small gravel as soon as they are hatched. We like this plan best. They will drink very little water, some of them refusing it entirely, so that it can do them no harm. Placed on a sandy floor with water before them for a couple of days and then a light feed has always started them off lively and strong for us and given them the go that they need.

When there are so many excellent prepared chick feeds on the market, sold at small cost, it is a userless trouble to perpetrate food for young chicks. These chick feeds are sold in the neighborhood of two cents a pound and as the chicks consume very little of them the cost is a trifling matter, unless you raise a great many chicks. In this event, you will find them so satisfactory that you will be sure to use one. Besides the commercial chick feeds are dry and composed of small grains which do not spoil if the chicks should ever come to them. Indeed, it is all the better to mix some of it in the sand on which the chicks are fed, and in this way the youngsters will learn to scratch for them.
And exercise is the life of anything.

If you can't get a good chick feed,
then raw oatmeal will be found excellent.
Sometimes your grocer will have a lot in which the outer husk has been removed and as this is unsalable he will let you have it for a trifle. The chicks relish
it great, and as there is no husk on it,
it will answer well.

Stale bread crumbs, where you have only a few chicks, are as good as anything. They contain a little salt which is an advantage, and if they are dry enough to crumble when rolled in your hands they can be fed in that way. If they are too dry, a little water poured over them—not much, but just enough to moisten them—is all right. Dip them once in water and set them aside till the
moisture penetrates through a d through.
This isn't so good as feeding it dry, but it will do.

Don't feed raw dough or rough mash such as you feed larger chicks. Raw dough sours in the crop and brings on all sorts of bowel troubles. If you want to feed this stuff, cook it well beforehand. Well meals through and through —not just a hard crust on the outside and the middle a soggy, wet mash; this is as bad as feeding it raw.

Chicks will do well for a while on a grain ration alone; but they will do better if fed a little meat from the first.
If the grain ration is dry and sweet chicks can be fed a little green cut bone from the very first. Just a little thrown in so that each chick can get a morsel or two, will help wonderfully. If you ever dropped a bit of meat into a brooder full
of two weeks' old chicks and saw them scramble and fight over it you won't doubt that they need it very fine, is safer and perhaps just as good. But it is costly. However, cost should be little considered in feeding chicks for the first few weeks, as a foundation can be then secured well worth many times cost.

A Beautiful Charity.

I know a woman who has been for two generations a successful teacher in a large
city—so successful with her fashionable school that when she was ready to retire
she had amassed a pretty little fortune.
She thereupon purchased a beautiful home in the mountains, which during the summer months becomes the refuge and retreat of a fortunate group of guests.
Most of the guests are women needing rest such as they could not otherwise afford to take from their busy city lives, says Good Housekeeping.

Few of whose needs she has learned in some casual fashion by chance or in a newspaper item. Sometimes she asks former guests to give names of those who need the summer relaxation. Often she urges guests to bring with them
some friend, thus doubling the pleasure to each. Sometimes on impulse, she invites a stranger whom she has seen but once, but whom, being a keen reader of character, she is not afraid to introduce to her home circle. School teachers, charity workers, librarians, students, grateful recipients of her hospitality, they are treated as the most honored personal friends; they are free to stay as long as they choose, to go when they feel best.

Each has her own hammock on the
breazy piazza; each has her special needs carefully considered; each is free
to make her own plans for the day, and
is asked only to be prompt at meals.
Every day there is a long, beautiful drive through the wonderful mountain scenery for any who cares to go; the hostess herself never drives, but maintains a stable for her guests. Here is, indeed, a most sisterly, charity toward that class which is generally regarded as help—a blessing, instead of leaving a "fard" to perplex her executors.

GILEAD.
Chester Peabody and family of Shelborne visited his brother, R. I. Peabody, Sunday.

Laban Watson and family from Randolph, N. H., visited his brother, M. V. B.
Watson, Sunday.

Mrs. Milan R. Bennett and little daughter Marion of Portland have been guests of her sister, Mrs. John E. Richardson, and her family.

The discovery on Wednesday, May 3, just at the fitting moment, of a fire on the shed of Mrs. J. W. Kimball's house, which started from burning timber, was without doubt saved much of our little village from destruction.

Telephones and Forest Fires.

Telephone service is worth thousands of dollars a year to the State of Maine in preventing loss by forest fires. It supplements an extensive patrol and lookout system in the wilderness by which fire wardens are notified in time to gather experienced men and extinguish a blaze before it is under great headway.

The "lines" run through nearly every remote section of the State and to the tops of many of the highest mountains, where men are stationed all through the dry season to detect fires. They are continually watching the forests with telescopes and are able to see for many miles. When fire or smoke is observed they telephone at once to the nearest fire warden, who gathers a force, follows the direction given, and puts out the fire.

There are 25 mountain stations maintained by the forest commissioner. A man lives in each one for several months
of every year. He is not only provided with a telescope, but has a range finder, detailed map of his own district and
other instruments that will help him.
In addition to the protection afforded by these mountain stations there is an extensive patrol maintained in all parts of the woods. In the driest season from 100 to 150 men are constantly walking along the wood roads and water systems and following the trails. They often discover small fires which they extinguish without assistance. At no point, however, is it far to a telephone station. Nearly always the instrument is fastened to a tree, but frequently the patrolman has a portable instrument such as a line use. This can be attached to the line at any point.

About 70 boxes containing axes, shovels and other fire-fighting implements, aggregating in value $5000, have been distributed about the State at convenient points, mostly in lumber camps, which are used by the fire fighters.

But without the telephone this system of patrol would be of little or no value. One man alone in the wilderness could do but little in stopping a fire spot of considerable headway, but the telephone gathers a gang in the quickest possible time. Speaking of the value of the telephone service in the woods Forest Commissioner Edgar E. Ring in his report for 1910 says:

"The value of these lookouts thus connected by telephone has been many times demonstrated by the watchman communicating with a warden, giving him the direction and almost the exact location of some small fire. One or two men sent to investigate and put out the fire in its early stages accomplishes what hundreds or an army of men could not do, after the fire has gained great headway and is being driven before high winds."

Not alone in the forest is a telephone
of value in the case of a fire, but all through the forest communities and small villages. Fire fighters are called together quickly by means of the telephone whether the fire be buildings burning or any fire liable to get beyond control.

Too Many Holidays.

"I am one of the many who can see no use whatever for the observing of April 19, Patriots' Day, as a holiday," said a well known business man.
"In the first place it does not represent anything. Fast Day was abolished because it had become obsolete and Patriots' Day was substituted. Upon the whole, I believe that we have too many holidays, although there are some
which should be retained and are enjoyed by all classes of people.
Fourth of July brings to mind the patriotism of those who fought and
suffered that a government of the people by the people and for people might be established; Christmas indicates the promotion of the truths of Christianity;
and Thanksgiving is given up to the home and the uniting of families. Such days as these are of use and ought to be encouraged.
Their is no observance of Patriots' Day except by base ball players and the public who enjoy that and other sports.
It looks to me like a day wasted. The entire business operations of the State are interrupted; thousands of working people lose a day's pay, and the big manufacturing interests suffer by the stopping of the machinery for a day.
I cannot see one reason why such a holiday should be continued and I think the Legislature that will abolish it will do more wisdom than act. When one stops to think what the loss of this day means in money and valuable time to the people of the State he will wonder how any Legislature could have thought of establishing the holiday."—[Portland Express.

"No License" Movement Organization.

In September the voters will be called upon to decide between license and no license, and the question must be decided by popular vote. An organization has been formed throughout the state to make a strong canvas in favor of the prohibitory laws. There is no party measure connected with it, and it resolves itself into a question of license or no license.

Done Daily in Norway. Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Norway still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

O. car I. Pietra, Cottage street, Norway, Me., says: "Several years ago I began to suffer from an acute attack of kidney trouble. I had caught a severe cold which settled on my kidneys and brought on terrible pains in the small of my back. There seemed to be a congestion of my kidneys and it was only with great difficulty that I was able to pass the secretions. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and decided to try them. I procured a box from Stone's Drug Store. They helped me from the first and after taking the contents of a few boxes, I was cured. I have not had any trouble from my kidneys since. I am glad to give Doan's Kidney Pills my highest endorsement."

My Old New England Hills.

As I watch the golden sunset slowly sinking in the west
When the burdened day is ended and the birds have gone to rest Once again my thoughts go roaming to the hills of old New England And I seem to hear an echo from my old New England hills Western breezes cool my forehead, western breezes fan my hair, But with all these soft caressing, cannot draw my thoughts from there.
And as I close my eyelids, this fair vision comes to me, Canst thou in my childhood, the dear old elm tree,
And children as we played in the cool and restful shade, By its green branches made.
And the wild birds in the branches sing their song so loud and shrill, That the notes seemed to echo, through the old New England hills.
Once again I roam the pasture, Where the fragrant breezes blow,
Or I spy the first blue violet peeping from the winter snow,
And I linger by the brookside to where the Oh! what a place on earth is brighter than New England in the spring.
As I go by the wild flower in the tall New England grass, Not to be cut down and withered, but keep struggling to the last.
But for each God has his purpose; let our restless hearts be still,
As we listen to the echo from my old New England hills.
In my dreams I hear the ripple of the pond
And I seem to hear dear old mother waiting for her wanderer's call;
But she will wait some day and will watch the sunshine play,
And the blue sky again,
Among the old New England hills.

The Hills of Maine.

O hills of Maine, fair hills of Maine,
Thy tumbling waters raise the strain
And with their silver song
The haunting echoes of my song.
O hills of Maine, cool hills of Maine, Where the fertile water plays Thy lofty crests with laughing pine Invite the weary to recline.
O hills of Maine, dear hills of Maine, When shall I tread thy paths again?
Once more a child with streaming locks To roam thy sunny slopes again.
And from a grey ledge catch the gleam Of many a sure lake and stream Crying below me at the base Of some high precipice's face, Or shining brightly from afar Like a fallen silver star.
O hills of Maine, pine topped hills
The memory of thy beauty thrills My soul, and hark me backward o'er the sea
To the land of my nativity.
To the land where snowy mountains rise In sunlit splendor to the skies And whitened surges beat the shore With a deep and thunderous roar.
The land where toil and honesty Are linked with ancient modesty, And welcomes as warm as the summer sun Where'er the stranger's path may run.
The land where the farmer sows his seed
To meet the dawn of winter's need,
And stores the grain in the golden fall When autumn days are few and all With antique dance and revelry And folk are playing merrily.
O hills of Maine, the fond regret Of bygone days, those happy days Of summer days and summer haze.
When dreamy youth with cheek of tan Rode o'er the clouds his caravan, Tossing his hat toward the trees, Listening to the mountain breeze;
Or laughing with the merry brook That shivered in many a mossy nook Where violets woke in anemyst bloom Half hidden in a pleasant gloom.
Or where the hermit's path may run Of scented grasses neatly pressed.
O hills of Maine, fair hills of Maine,
Thy tumbling waters raise the strain
And with their silver tones prolong
The haunting echoes of my song.

Marriage Proposals.

Here is a collection of marriage proposals typical of different nationalities:—
A Russian—"Natasha, my little dove, soul of my soul, I live you with my love heart, with my whole being. I love you more than I can tell you how much I should trouble befall me, my love will conquer everything. Be mine, oh Natasha!"
A Frenchman—"You are divine, ideal. Today I will press my suit before your parents, and you, my fairy, you will becom my wife!"
An Englishman—"I am about to start on a long voyage and I shall be lonely. I wonder if you would care to marry me and let us make this journey together?"
A German—"Fraulein, you are a noble woman. You have read and understood my book. I cannot tell you how much I admire and esteem you. May I dare to offer you my hand?"
An Italian—"Clara, mira, you are fairer than the blushing dawn. Your voice is more melodious than the soft wind. Oh, let me kiss the tip of your dark locks and let those heavenly eyes not spurn me, for otherwise I must die. Live with-out you I can not."
A Montenegro—"You are a handsome and a good girl. If you will marry me I will cut off two Turks' heads and lay them at your feet."
What is that of the United States?

Our Feathered Friends.

The Bluebird's Color.
The friendship between the robin and the bluebird is accounted for in a legend. When a robin, filled with pity for his suffering lord, bore him drops of water as he hung upon the cross a little brown bird thought:
"Oh, I too love him! Why can I not do something to ease his pain?"
So she made a cup out of a leaf, and, filling it with water, met the robin and gave it to him so that he would not have to fly so far as he returned for more of the cooling liquid. And when at last he came with the news that his Lord was dead she bathed his bleeding breast that was wounded by cruel thorns.
Then the master of the birds said to the little brown bird:—"Because you loved the Lord and would have helped him you shall henceforth wear a coat of blue." And that is why this little brown bird has ever since then been a little blue bird and is never far away from the robin when he comes in the spring. This will be something to think of when a bit of blue flies between you and the sun and you know our Lady's bird has come.

The Gnatcatcher's Nest.

Of course we can all understand that the little gnatcatcher likes a warm snug nest, but why she should build it so very deep and narrow is a riddle and she will not tell us the answer. It must be very uncomfortable for her to sit there day after day with her tail cocked up high on one side and her sharp little bill just sticking out above the other edge. She seems to like it though, and when you go to look at her she is so well satisfied with the situation that if you want to see her pretty speckled eggs you gently unless you have shaken the nest very unnecessarily hard in climbing it. This nest was about forty feet up in a big oak tree which the very highest winds could not rock to any extent, so the deep cup shape of her little dwelling was not for fear of the eggs being shaken out.
Now this particular nest I found when it was just begun. The birds didn't mind me a bit but came right up with their mouths full of building stuff and actually sang with their mouths full. I thought I was a recognized acquaintance and when I pulled Mrs. Gnatcatcher's long tail just to hint that I would like to take a peep at her house treasures she got real rowdy. If she had been big enough I would have been well thrashed, so I cut my visit very short.

The Surgeon Bird.

Two birds were building a nest under a study window. A gentleman sat in that study every day. He watched the birds. They were building the nest of clay. They brought round bits of wet clay in their bills. They stuck these bits upon the wall.
After they had worked busily for a while, would perch on a tree nearby. They would sit and look at the nest. Some times they would fly down and tear away all that they had built. Sometimes, a part of the nest would fall down. Then the bird would sit and think how to build it better.
Right in the middle of their work an accident happened. One of the birds stepped on a piece of broken glass. It cut her foot very badly.
But Mrs. Bird was a brave little body. She wished to keep on with her work. She did keep on until she was faint and sick, and could not fly up from the ground. Then she lay down. She closed her eyes. She looked very sick. The other bird looked at her anxiously. Then he turned around and gave three loud, strange cries. Soon, several birds came flying about to see what was the matter.
A little surgeon bird came with them. He looked liked the others, but he was soon showed that he was the surgeon. He brought a bit of wet clay in his bill. He ground it fine with his own little beak. Then he spread it on the bird's sore, stiff foot, just as a surgeon spreads a plaster. Next, he took in his bill a long green cornstalk which lay near. He flew up on a tin water-pipe under the window. One end of the cornstalk was near the lame bird. She understood what to do. She took hold of it with bill, and helped herself up on the water-pipe, too. Then the surgeon bird helped her into the half built nest.
Poor Mrs. Bird! It was very hard to be sick, and to move into a half built house.
What do you suppose the little surgeon did next? He went to work and heaped Mr. Bird finish the nest, then he flew off home.
Could the gentleman in the study have been kinder or wiser than that little bird?

The First Feeding of Chicks.
When a chick is first hatched it is about as soft and mushy a piece of animal life as can be imagined. Its bones and flesh are merely a bag to hold the yolk of the egg from which it came. This yolk is inclosed whole in the chick's interior and furnishes the necessary food for the first few days. It doesn't need any other food, indeed other food is likely
been entirely dissolved and assimilated
by the chick's system, it is better that
it have nothing to eat.
These few days when the yolk is being digested should be a time of prepara-
is one thing absolutely essential and that is sand. Put a newly hatched chick out on the ground and before it can run
it will be found picking at the coarse
grains of sand and small pebbles. This
is not due to hunger, for it is not hungry;
but it is instinct to prepare its grinding apparatus and get it in working order.
Some breeders prefer keeping all
chicks, believing it produces bowel
derangement; but this is very doubtful.
Many breeders allow the chicks water
as they are hatched. We like this plan
best. They will drink very little water,
a sandy floor or soil with sand in the neighborhood of two cents a pound and as the chicks consume very little of them the cost is a trifling matter, unless you raise a great many chicks. In this event,
you will find them so satisfactory that
commercial chick foods are dry and
composed of small grains which do not spoil if the chicks should overlook some of them. Indeed, it is all the better to mix some of it in the sand on which the
chicks are fed, and in this way the
youngsters will learn to scratch for them.
And exercise is the life of anything.
If you can't get a good chick food,
then raw oatmeal will be found excellent.
Sometimes your grocer will have a lot of rich cream which you can find a home, and as this is unsalable he will let
you have it for a trifle. The chicks relish
it great, and as there is no husk on it,
it will answer well.
Stale bread crumbs, where you have
thing. They contain a little salt which is an advantage, and if they are dry enough to crumble a little in your hand they can be fed in that way. If they are too dry, a little water poured
over them—not much, but just enough
to moisten them—is all right. Dip them
once in water and set them aside till the
moisture penetrates through a d through.
This isn't so good as feeding it dry, but
it will do.

such as you feed larger chicks. Raw
to feed this stuff, cook it well beforehand. Well means through and through
—not just a hard crust on the outside
and the middle a soggy, wet mash; this
is as bad as feeding it raw.
Chicks will do well for a while on a
grain ration alone, but they will do
better if fed a little meat from the first.
If the grain ration is dry and sweet chicks can be fed a little green out bene
from the very first. Just a little thrown
in so that each chick can get a morsel or
two, will help wonderfully. If you ever
doubt that it needed it.
Cooked meat cut up very fine, is safer
and perhaps just as good. But it is
few weeks, as a foundation can be then
secured well worth many times cost.

A Beautiful Charity.
I know a woman who has been for two
city—so successful with her fashionable
school that when she was ready to retire
she had amassed a pretty little fortune.
She thereupon purchased a beautiful home in the mountains, which during the summer months becomes the refuge
and retreat of a fortunate group of guests.
Most of the guests are women needing
rest such as they could not otherwise afford to take from their busy city lives,
says Good Housekeeping.
Few of these needs she has learned in some casual fashion—by chance or in a newspaper item. Sometimes she asks
who need the summer relaxation. Often
she urges guests to bring with them
some friend, thus doubling the pleasure
to each. Sometimes on impulse, she in-
but once, but whom, being a keen
reader of character, she is not afraid to
introduce to her home circle. School
teachers, charity workers, librarians,
students, grateful recipients of her
hospitality, they are treated as the most
to stay as long as they choose, to go
when they feel best.
Each has her own hammock on the
is asked only to be prompt at meals.
Every day there is a long, beautiful
hostess herself never drives, but maintains a steady pace in her motor. Here, indeed, a most sisterly charity toward that class which is generally hardest to help—a blessing, instead of leaving a "furd" to perplex her executors.

Telephones and Forest Fires.
Telephone service is worth thousands
lookout system in the wilderness by
to gather experienced men and extinguish a blaze before it is under great
headway.
The fires run through nearly every
remote section of the State and to the
tops of many of the highest mountains,
where men are stationed all through the
continually watching the forests with
telescopes and are able to see for many
miles. When fire or smoke is observed
warden, who gathers a force, follows the direction given, and puts out the fire.
There are 25 mountain stations maintained by the forest commissioner. A
of every year. He is not only provided
with a telescope, but has a range finder,
detailed map of his own district and
other instruments that will help him.
In addition to the protection afforded
of the woods. In the driest season from
along the wood roads and water systems
discover small fires which they extinguish with assistance. At no
station. Nearly always the instrument is fastened to a tree, but frequently the patrolman has a portable instrument such as license use. This can be attached to the line at any point.
About 75 boxes containing axes, shovels and other fire-fighting implements, aggregating in value $5000, have been distributed about the State at
convenient points, mostly in lumber
camps, which are used by the fire fighters.
But without the telephone this sys-
could do but little in stopping a fire.
In communicating with a warden, giving
him the direction and almost the exact
men sent to investigate and put out the
winds.

Not alone in the forest is a telephone
through the forest communities and
together quickly by means of the telephone whether the fire be buildings millinery goods.

at work for Leroy Pulsifer, grafting and blasting rocks in his orchard.

at the mill pond, Saturday, one measuring thirty-seven inches. There was but little difference in the length of the four.

May 8th, Umbagog lake is nearly clear of ice.

last week.

A. W. Judkins.

for a pair of horses.
Mrs. Paul West and two children have come home for the summer.

side, and thoroughly cleaned and varnished.

ney's, while Mr. Brown is working on the river.

where he has a position teaching grammar school.

four horses, returning with a sleek fat pair of new ones.

church, Sunday. He has walked from California, holding services at many churches on his way, during the last seven years.

day, on business.

Bridge were at W. E. Benson's, Sunday.

LOVELL CENTER.
Salmon fishing opened with a rush at Brown's camp on Lake Kezar, May 6th.
Mrs. M. S. Flint of New York being high liner, landing a salmon weighing 13 pounds and 14 ounces, and another weighing 8 pounds and 11 ounces. Dr.
W. H. Thayer of New Bedford, Mass., took one whose weight was 7 pounds and 14 ounces. Fish were also taken by E. W. Bartlett, B. E. Brown and H. D.
Umbraceter of Boston. There is every indication that the early spring salmon fishing in Kezar this year will eclipse that of any previous season.

Too Many Holidays.
"I am one of the many who can see
no use whatever for the observing of
said a well known business man.
"In the first place it does not represent anything. Fast Day was abolished
because it had become obsolete and Patriots' Day was substituted. Upon
the whole I believe that we have too
which should be retained and are enjoyed by all classes of people.
Fourth of July brings to mind the
patriotism of those who fought and
by the people and for people might be
established; Christmas indicates the
promotion of the truths of Christianity;
and Thanksgiving is given up to the
be encouraged.
There is no observance of Patriots'
Day except by base ball players and the
public who enjoy that and other sports.
It looks to me like a day wasted. The
entire business operations of the State
manufacturing interests suffer by the
stopping of the machinery for a day.
I cannot see one reason why such a
holiday should be continued and I think
the Legislature that will abolish it will do a commendable act. When one stops
to think what the loss of this day means in money and valuable time to the people of the State he will wonder how any Legislature could have thought of
establishing the holiday.—[Portland Express.]

"No License" Movement Organization.
In September the voters will be called
license, and the question must be de-
has been formed throughout the state to
prohibitory law. There is no party measure connected with it, and it
or no license.

Catarrh Vanishes.
Relief in Two Minutes with Wonderful Money Back Cure.
Go to Noyes Drug Store to-day, and tell him you want a Hyomei outfit (pronounce it High-o-me).
Open the box and inside you will find a bottle of HYOMEI and a hard rubber inhaler.
Inside this inhaler which opens at both ends you will find some antiseptic gauze.
Pour a few drops of Hyomei into the inhaler and saturate the gauze. Then with both ends of the inhaler open, breathe HYOMEI, and the destruction of pernicious catarrh germs begins at once.
You can breathe HYOMEI through either the nose or mouth. Read the directions.
Hyomei is made from Australian Eucalyptus and mixed with other important antiseptics, and the greatest, most sensible and pleasant treatment for catarrh ever known.
Just breathe it; no stomach dosing; no sprays or douches, this great antiseptic air soothes the mucous membrane and kills all germs.
Complete outfit, $1.00. Extra bottle if afterward needed, only 50c. Money back from Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, or leading druggists everywhere if it doesn't cure catarrh, coughs, colds, croup and sore throat.
To break up cold in head or chest in a few minutes, pour a teaspoonful of Hyomei into a bowl of boiling water; cover head and bowl with towel and breathe the vapor. 20-22

HENRY G. BEYER, JR., PORTLAND, MAINE

When to Plant Trees.

The right time to plant trees is when the frost is out of the ground and the trees begin to bud. We do not believe in fall planting, however much nurserymen may urge it. The kind of day on which you plant is second in importance only to the season. If you have but a small amount of planting to do, don't plant on a hot day or a windy day, but on a cool damp day. When you are planting take time to do it right. Don't stick the roots of your trees down into a rough or clumpy soil, but prepare a bed for the tree as you would for wheat or corn. When your trees come, if you do not have time to plant them, there is no particular hurry. Heel them in by simply burying the roots deep in fresh earth. Plant two or three inches deeper than they stood in the nursery. If your ground is in good condition, compact it around the roots of the trees pretty firmly. If your land is thoroughly soaked with water, just wait until it is in good condition; and in any case leave two or three inches of the surface loose, so as to form a dirt mulch. By all means plant trees, however, if you expect to need fence posts some years from now, if you are not fully supplied with fruit, or if your farm is not properly groved. Don't plant poor trees in countries where you can grow good ones. Plant catalpa for fence posts, if you can get the right species. Ash will grow almost all over our territory. South of the central line of Iowa use the Russian mulberry for wind-breaks and for a future supply of fence posts. If you have not planted anything else plant white or golden willow or cottonwood. Don't plant box elder, unless you are in a section of the country where nothing else will stand the winds; but plant trees, if you think you will have any use for them ten years from now.

Nursing as a Career.

A World Wide Calling. Free Training Provided.

It is said that nursing is one of the most inviting fields of human service and that its financial return surpasses any other occupation open to young women. It develops all the native graces of womanhood and leads the way to positions of trust and influence. The demand for more nurses is a world wide call.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses, located in Philadelphia, Pa., has undertaken to meet this demand by offering free scholarships to young women in all parts of the country. Room, board, laundering, incidental expenses, special financial assistance and railroad fare home on completion of the course are provided. Length of Course two years. Also Special Short Course and a Home Study Course for those who must quickly prepare for self-support.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses is a benevolent institution conducted without hope of gain or profit in the interest of ambitious young women. Readers of this paper can get full information by writing the school at once.

Cedron Seed Plant.
In Central America many natives are gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable curative powers. But few drug stores carry this seed, owing to the high cost of the article.
This country is a large consumer of this costly seed because it enters into the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna, sold the world over.

FRYEBURG.

Praise for Fryeburg Artist.

An artist exhibiting for the first time in the spring exhibition of the Portland Society of Art is Benjamin T. Newman of Fryeburg, six of whose pictures are shown: Mother and Child, (1) a life size portrait, beautiful in arrangement, shows fine qualities of painting. The rendering of the hands of both mother and child, the sun-touched head of the little one, and the broadly simple treatment of the shadowed portions of the whole figure, awaken keen admiration. The Merry Girl, (2) has special charm not only for the thorough construction of the figure, not even for the beauty of the tenderly painted head and its exquisite relation to its background of shadowy sky, but beyond these for its intangible suggestion of tender human sympathy. There is beauty of the most searching sort in the painting of the girl's head.

Another painting of fine quality is Winter Twilight, (3) a small landscape, beautiful in treatment and color, pervaded with the poetry of night descending in cool stillness upon winter woods and lake. Other paintings of Mr. Newman are Study of Sheep, (71), Study of Kittens (52) and Winter Birch (70).

BUCKFIELD.

William Irish.
William Irish died at his home on High street, May 10th. He had had a lingering illness of kidney trouble and other complications.

Mr. Irish was born in Hartford, Aug. 19, 1823, and was one of nine children of Stephen and Mary (Bliss) Irish, who were among the settlers of the town. In 1838 he married Sybil Clementine Keene of Sumner, who died in 1857, leaving one son, Herbert F., a farmer of Buckfield.

In 1859, he married Mary Ann Ford of Sumner, who survives him. They had three children, Sybil C., who died at five years of age; Clara H., who married G. E. Munson of Auburn; and Willie D., who died fourteen years ago. Mr. Irish was a farmer. He cleared the farm at Buckfield now owned and occupied by Frank Chase. He afterwards moved to Hartford, where he lived until 12 years ago, when failing health compelled him to give up the care of the farm, and he purchased the residence in Buckfield, where he has since lived.

Interment was in the family lot in the village cemetery.

Buckfield Grange recently conferred the third and fourth degrees on a class of sixteen.

The selectmen have purchased a new lever, which is doing good work and saving a lot of hard work.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Irish and Myra have returned from Redlands, Cal. They have been away since February.

W. C. Spaulding and Mrs. Louise Spaulding have returned to their home in Caribou after a week spent with relatives here.

When a Girl is Extravagant.

If you are extravagant, you are a spendthrift. The two words mean pretty nearly the same thing. The girl who spends more than she earns or more than her father can afford to give her, the girl who has holes in her pocket through which slip away the small coins that make dollars, the girl, in short, who can never deny herself a box of bonbons, a bunch of violets, a new magazine, a bit of jewelry or any other luxury irrespective of her income, is an extravagant girl, writes Margaret Sangster.

There is no particular merit in saving money simply that it may be hoarded. Money should be judiciously used, it should be invested so that it will bring its owner an equal interest; it should be expended so that it will give comfort to one's dear ones, and, on the whole, it should be regarded as a thing held in trust to be rightly disposed of.

Prince Albert gave his daughter, who afterward became Princess of Germany and the mother of the reigning Kaiser, an excellent bit of advice when she was a girl at home in the palace where Queen Victoria lived and ruled, "Always have a margin. Never spend your whole allowance." This was the counsel of a wise, frugal and far-seeing prince.

There is another aspect of extravagance which should be presented to the mind of the average girl much oftener and far more strongly than is usually the case. Girls thoughtlessly permit young men who are paying them devoted attention or merely showing casual politeness to spend more money than the ordinary youth on salary or beginning business can comfortably spare.

Of course, it is easy to criticize a young fellow who shrinks from seeming stingy, and the Spartan spectator may covetously criticize him for his folly. If he be a youth at college drawing upon the means of parents at home during his days for preparation for life, he is the more to be blamed. Many a story could be written, a story pitifully tragic, about the self-denials of home people who from day to day deprive themselves of necessary comforts that the son at the university may be unhampered in gaining his education.

The son, admiring a beautiful girl and wishing to win her at all hazards, contracts debts which he cannot pay, brings sorrow on the hearts of his parents and plants for himself a future harvest of shame and self-accusation. In this matter girls should be wiser than boys. They should let it be seen plainly and literally that they prefer honest simplicity to lavish extravagance, and the girl who loves a man should decline to be a millstone, so to speak, about his neck, in the days of betrothal or of previous courtship.

Just before Artemus Ward's death Robertson poured out some medicine and offered it to the sick man, who said, "My dear Tom, I won't take any more of that horrible stuff."

Robertson urged him to swallow the mixture, saying, "Do, now—there's a dear fellow—for my sake. You know I would do anything for you."

"Would you?" said Ward feebly, grasping his friend's hand for the last time.

"I would indeed," said Robertson. "Then you take it."

Ward passed away a few hours afterward.

Safe Treatment for Headache.

The rational treatment for headache is to get at the cause, if possible, and remove it. Headache is only a symptom of trouble somewhere in the system, and dosing with tablets or powders containing acetaminophen or other derivatives which stop the pain temporarily but weaken the heart, is at once unsafe and unwise. The headache may come from your eyes, then a good oculist can help you at once with proper eyeglasses; but if it comes with furred tongue, loss of appetite, nausea, and constipation, it is usually the result of disordered digestion, or torpid liver, and one or two doses of L. F. Atwood's Medicine will speedily help you by carrying off impurities and restoring the clogged digestive organs to their normal activity. In using this old reliable remedy, you take no chances of weakening the heart's action.

It has a record of sixty years as a safe headache remedy. The "L. F." Medicine Co., Portland, Maine.
